

This week we've been writing about how we have changed since infancy, using simple sentences with capital letters and full stops.

In the woods we worked in teams to make dens, which eight people could shelter under.

In maths we looked at different ways of making the number 5.

Science cool time was filled with fun experiments including: wrapping ice cubes in different materials to observe how they melted and making paper lilies that opened when they floated on water.

We've started to read Danny the Champion of World by Roald Dahl.

In assembly the children are continuing to listen to pieces of music by famous composers, including Mozart's Horn Concerto No 4.
